Objective and investment policy

The objective of the mutual fund is to offer flexible management, primarily invested in equity markets, over a minimum investment period of five years. Despite operating within larger allocation limits, the mutual fund's profile may be compared with an allocation made up of 95% equities and 5% public and private bonds on average, exposed in developed markets with a euro bias as well as in emerging markets.

The mutual fund is managed actively without any reference to a benchmark index.

The investment strategy is discretionary and is based on a portfolio management process organised around three pillars:

- a medium/long-term strategic asset allocation depending on the manager's level of conviction (asset classes, geographical areas, sectors),
- a tactical allocation resulting from the manager's short-term convictions in order to strive to take advantage of market opportunities,
- a selection of undertakings for collective investment (UCI) and managers able to, according to us, generate performance over time.

Risk and Reward Profile

Do not run any unnecessary risk. Read the Key Information Document (KID).

The risk and reward indicator is based on price volatility over the last five years, and is an indicator of absolute risk. Historical data may not be a reliable indication for the future. The value of an investment, and any income from it, may fall as well as rise, and you may not get back the amount you originally invested. The category is not guaranteed to remain unchanged and the categorisation may shift over time. The lowest category does not mean a risk-free investment. This Mutual Fund is classified in category 4 because its price or simulated data has shown medium fluctuations historically.

Fund Manager Commentary

Economic Environment

In January, Donald Trump and Elon Musk took centre stage in the news, profoundly marking the financial and media landscape. With no specific announcement on tariffs before the end of the month, global equity markets rose 2.7% in euros.

The eurozone outperformed other regions over the month with the MSCI EMU up 7.3%. Despite mixed economic indicators, investors preferred to focus on the good news, with a slightly better performance from the composite PMI, back above the 50-point threshold, and more favourable corporate results in certain sectors such as luxury goods.

The US markets also ended the month in positive territory with the S&P 500 up 2.8% in euros. Corporate results supported share prices but, for once, technology stocks were weighed down by China's announcement about DeepSeek, a new open architecture and less CPU-intensive AI model, rivalling ChatGPT. Signs of a slowdown in economic growth (composite PMI at 52.4 in January following 55.4 in December) also had a negative impact.

As regards central banks, unsurprisingly, in the United States, the Fed left its key rate unchanged at 4.25-4.50% following cuts made in the last three meetings, while the ECB lowered its key rate by a further 25 basis points to 2.75%.

The development of long-term interest rates has followed the pace of growth. In the eurozone, the German 10-year yield rose from 2.37% to 2.46%, while in the United States, the 10-year yield fell very slightly from 4.57% to 4.54%.

Performance & current holdings

Our overexposure to equity markets made a positive contribution and we are gradually reducing our positions. Our regional equity allocation favours the United States, which has been reduced over the last few weeks, and Europe, where we have increased our position at the expense of emerging markets and Japan, which were reduced over the month.

With the "tech giants" losing their hegemony in terms of performances over the month, our diversified positions in value stocks and the financial sectors in Europe and the United States made a positive contribution.

In Europe, our investment vehicles performed in line with market indices. We gain from our overexposure to the bank sector. We sold our exposure to small caps to strengthen our position in low-volatility and quality stocks.

In the United States, we reduced our positions in small caps and growth stocks after the rally welcoming Trump's return. We increased the proportion of low-volatility stocks and our index fund.

In terms of emerging markets, we benefited from our diversification into frontier markets, Türkiye and Poland. Our long-term growth themed funds outperformed global indices, particularly in the Artificial Intelligence segment as well as gold mining. Finally, our diversification into commodities made a positive contribution.

Outlook

For 2025, we expect a soft landing in the US and in developed economies, combined with stabilisation in China. At the halfway point of the earnings season in the United States, 2024 earnings are up almost 10% compared with 2023.

Sentiment remains fairly high, but with ongoing hawkish foreign policy rhetoric and interest rates still high, some caution is required. Increases in long-term real yields have had no effect while growth is slowing and valuations are on the high side, warranting a wait-and-see approach.

We marginally favour developed markets over emerging markets. Within developed countries, we still prefer US equities and to a lesser extent the eurozone over the Japanese market.

In the United States, we continue to overweight growth and defensive stocks, while in the Eurozone, our allocation is evenly split between undervalued, growth and defensive stocks. Finally, in emerging markets, we maintain a significant share of diversification and favour China in Asia.
